

Stephanie Papilaris

Administrative Coordinator

Stephanie Papilaris is a recent graduate of Auburn University in Alabama where she majored in Public Relations, Marketing, and Spanish. During the course of her college career, Stephanie was involved in several on-campus organizations including SGA (Student Government Organization), IMPACT (Tutoring and Volunteer Program), and Alpha Chi Omega sorority. She also had several jobs and internships in both Alabama and Florida where she began to get some work experience and to learn what type of company would best suit her, post graduation.

After moving back home to Florida, Stephanie decided that it was time for a change of scenery and began looking for a job in Denver at the type of company that would be a good fit for her. The ideal company, in her mind, would make her feel comfortable with her co workers, provide her with a job that interested her, and also challenge her to learn and contribute. The interview process was rather unusual, as she searched for jobs over 1,800 miles away from her Orlando home, but after several phone interviews and emails Stephanie decided that the company for her was Corona Research.

She packed up and moved across the country to Denver in three days. When she arrived at Corona Research on her first day, despite being tired from the long journey, she was immediately excited about her decision to work for Corona Research. “I have never worked for a place where every employee cared enough about welcoming me that they would all sit down and meet with me on my first day. It made me feel like everyone loves working here and loves what they do.”

After 2 ½ months working as Project Assistant, Stephanie moved into the Administrative Coordinator position. In this position, Stephanie will be providing administrative and project management support to the Quantitative practice area principal as well as working directly with the Quantitative staff on organizing and monitoring project progress.

In her free time, Stephanie enjoys a variety of activities. A dancer since she was five years old, Stephanie loves to find any excuse to dance – in a class or a more social setting. Stephanie enjoys singing and playing instruments to relax or just going to a new movie. Stephanie is also excited for winter weekends and snowboarding!

“I have never worked for a place where every employee cared enough about welcoming me that they would all sit down and meet with me on my first day. It made me feel like everyone loves working here and loves what they do.”